

M U T

I saw thee mutable
Of fancy, fear'd left one day thou would'st leave me. Milt.
MUTABLENESS. n. f. [from mutable.] Changeableness; uncertainty; instability.
MUTATION. n. f. [mutation, French; mutatio, Lat.] Change; alteration.
His honour
Was nothing but mutation, ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
The vicissitude or mutations in the superior globe are no fit matter for this present argument. Bacon's Essays.
To make plants grow out of the fun or open air is a great mutation in nature, and may induce a change in the feed. Bacon.
MUTE. adj. [muet, French; mutus, Latin.]
1. Silent; not vocal; not having the use of voice.
Why did he reason in my soul implant,
And speech, th' effect of reason? To the mute
My speech is left; my reason to the brute. Dryden.
Mute solemn sorrow, free from female noise,
Such as the majesty of grief detroys. Dryden.
2. Having nothing to say.
Say she be mute, and will not speak a word,
Then I'll commend her volubility. Shakespeare.
All fat mute,
Pondering the danger with deep thoughts. Milton.
All the heav'nly choir stood mute,
And silence was in heav'n. Milt. Paradise Lost, l. iii.
The whole perplex'd ignoble crowd,
Mute to my questions, in my praises loud, Echo'd the word. Prior.
MUTE. n. f.
1. One that has no power of speech.
Either our history shall with full mouth
Speak freely of our acts; or else our grave,
Like Turkish mutes, shall have a tongueless mouth. Shakef.
Your mute I'll be;
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see. Shakef.
He that never hears a word spoken, no wonder if he remain speechless; as one mute do, who from an infant should be bred up amongst mutes, and have no teaching. Holder.
Let the figures, to which art cannot give a voice, imitate the mutes in their actions. Dryden's Dufresnoy.
2. A letter which without a vowel can make no found.
Grammarians note the easy pronunciation of a mute before a liquid, which doth not therefore necessarily make the preceding vowel long. Holder's Elements of Speech.
TO MUTE. v. n. [mutire, French.] To dung as birds.
Mine eyes being open, the sparrows muted warm dung into mine eyes. Tob. ii. 10.
I could not fright the crows,
Or the least bird from muting on my head. Ben. Johnson.
The bird not able to digest the fruit, from her inconverted muting ariseth this plant. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
MUTELY. adv. [from mute.] Silently; not vocally.
Driving dumb silence from the portal door,
Where he had mutely fat two hours before. Milton.
TO MUTILATE. v. a. [mutire, Fr. mutile, Latin.] To deprive of some essential part.
Such fearing to concede a monstrosity, or mutilate the integrity of Adam, preventively conceive the creation of thirteen ribs. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
Sylburgius justly complains that the place is mutilated. Still.
Among the mutilated poets of antiquity there is none whose fragments are so beautiful as those of Sappho. Addison.
Aristotle's works were corrupted, from Strabo's account of their having been mutilated and consumed with moisture. Baker.
MUTILATION. n. f. [mutation, Fr. mutile, from mutile, Lat.]
Deprivation of a limb, or any essential part.
The subject had been oppressed by fines, imprisonments, mutilations, pillories, and banishments. Carendon.
Mutilations are not transmitted from father to son, the blind begetting such as can see: cripples, mutilate in their own persons, do come out perfect in their generations. Brown.
MUTINE. n. f. [mutin, French.] A mutineer; a mover of insurrection.
Not in use.
In my heart there was a kind of fighting,
That would not let me sleep; methought I lay Worfe than the mutines in the bilboes. Shakespeare. Hamlet.
Like the mutines of Jerusalem,
Be friends a while. Shakespeare's King John.
MUTINEER. n. f. [from mutin, French.] A mover of sedition;
an opposer of lawful authority.
The war of the duke of Urbino, head of the Spanish mutineers, was unjust. Bacon's War with Spain.
Set wide the mutineers garden-gate;
For there our mutineers appoint to meet. Dryden.
They have cashiered several of their followers as mutineers, who have contradicted them in political conversations. Addison.
MUTINOUS. adj. [mutin, French.] Seditious; busy in insurrection; turbulent.

M U T

It tauntingly replied
To th' discontented members, th' mutinous parts,
That envied his receipt. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
The laws of England should be administered, and the mutinous severely suppressed. Hayward.
Lend me your guards, that if persuasion fail,
Force may against the mutinous prevail. Waller.
My ears are deaf with this impatient crowd;
Their wants are now grown mutinous and loud. Dryden.
MUTINOUSLY. adv. [from mutinous.] Seditiously; turbulently.
A woman, a young woman, a fair woman, was to govern a people in nature mutinously proud, and always before used to hard governments. Sidney.
Men imprudently often, seditiously and mutinously sometimes, employ their zeal for persons. Spratt's Sermon.
MUTINOUSNESS. n. f. [from mutinous.] Seditiousness; turbulence.
TO MUTIN. v. n. [mutiner, French.] To rise against authority;
to make insurrection; to move sedition.
The spirit of my father begins to mutiny against this servitude.
The people mutiny, the fort is mine,
And all the soldiers to my will incline. Waller.
When Caesar's army mutinied, and grew troublesome, no argument could appease them. South's Sermon.
MUTINY. n. f. [from the verb.] Insurrection; sedition.
The king fled to a strong castle, where he was gathering forces to suppress this mutiny. Sidney.
I th' war
Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they shew'd
Most valour, spoke not for them. Shakespeare. Coriolanus.
In most strange postures We've seen him sit himself.
—There is a mutiny in's mind. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.
Of heav'n were falling, and these elements
In mutiny had from her axle torn
The steadfast earth. Milton's Parad. Lost, l. ii.
Soldiers grow pernicious to their master who becomes their servant, and is in danger of their mutinies, as much as any government of seditions. Temple.
TO MUTTER. v. n. [mutire, mutare, Latin.] To grumble;
to murmur.
What would you ask me, that I would deny,
Or stand so muttering on?
How! what does his cashier'd worship mutter? Shakespeare. Othello.
Sky low'd, and muttering thunder some sad drops
Wept, at completing of the mortal sin Original! Milton's Par. Lost, l. ix.
They may freely trespass, and do as they please; no man dare accuse them, no, not so much as mutter against them.
Burton on Melancholy.
Bold Britons, at a brave bear-garden fray,
Are rous'd; and clatt'ring sticks cry, play, play, play:
Mean time your filthy foreigner will stare,
And mutter to himself, ha, gens barbare!
And it is well he mutters, well for him;
Our butchers else would tear him limb from limb. Dryden.
When the tongue of a beautiful female was cut out, it could not forbear muttering. Addison's Spectator.
TO MUTTER. v. a. To utter with imperfect articulation; to grumble forth.
Amongst the soldiers this is muttered,
That here you maintain fe'ral factions. Shakespeare. Hen. VI.
A kind of men, so loose of soul,
That in their sleep will mutter their affairs. Shakespeare. Othello.
Your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered per-
A hateful prattling tongue,
That blows up jealousies, and heightens fears,
By muttering poisonous whispers in mens ears. Crash.
MUTTER. n. f. [from the verb.] Murmur; obscure utterance.
Without his rod revers'd,
And backward mutters of dissembling power,
We cannot free the lady. Milton.
MUTTERER. n. f. [from mutter.] Grumbler; murmurer.
MUTTERINGLY. adv. [from muttering.] With a low voice;
without distinct articulation.
MUTTON. n. f. [mutton, French.]
1. The flesh of sheep dressed for food.
The fat of roasted mutton or beef, falling on the birds, will baste them. Swift's Directions to the Cook.
2. A sheep: now only in ludicrous language.
Here's too small a pasture for such flocks of muttons. Shak.
The flesh of muttons is better tasted where the sheep feed upon wild thyme and wholesome herbs. Bacon's Nat. Hist.
Within a few days were brought out of the country two thousand muttons. Hayward's Edw. VI.
MUTTONFIST.

M Y O

MUTTONFIST. n. f. [mutton and fist.] A hand large and red.
Will he who saw the soldiers muttonfist,
And saw thee maul'd appear within the list
To witness truth. Dryden's Juvenal, sat. 16.
MUTUAL. adj. [mutuel, French; mutuus, Lat.] Reciprocal;
each acting in return or correspondence to the other.
Note a wild and wanton herd,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
If they perchance but hear a trumpet found,
You shall perceive them make a mutual stand,
By the sweet power of musick. Shakespeare. Merch. of Venice.
What should most excite a mutual flame,
Your rural cares and pleasures are the same. Pope.
MUTUALLY. adv. [from mutual.] Reciprocally; in return.
He never bore
Like labour with the rest; where th' other instruments
Did see, and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel,
And mutually participate. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.
Dear love I bear to fair Anne Page,
Who mutually hath answer'd my affection. Shakespeare.
The tongue and pen mutually assist one another, writing what we speak, and speaking what we write. Holder.
Pellucid substances act upon the rays of light at a distance, in refracting, reflecting and inflecting them, and the rays mutually agitate the parts of those substances at a distance for heating them. Newton's Opticks.
They mutually teach, and are taught, that lesson of vain confidence and security. Atterbury's Sermons.
May I the sacred pleasures know
Of strictest amity, nor ever want
A friend with whom I mutually may share Gladness and anguish. Philips.
MUTUALITY. n. f. [from mutual.] Reciprocation.
Villanous thoughts, Rodrigo! when these mutualities fo marshall the way, hard at hand comes the incorporate conclusion. Shakespeare's Othello.
MUZZLE. n. f. [museau, French.]
1. The mouth of any thing; the mouth of a man in contempt.
But ever and anon turning her muzzle toward me, she threw such a poised upon me, as might well have given a surfeit to any weak lover's stomach. Sidney, b. ii.
Huygens has proved, that a bullet continuing in the velocity with which it leaves the muzzle of the cannon, would require twenty-five years to pass from us to the sun. Cheyne.
If the poker be out of the way, or broken, stir the fire with the tongs; if the tongs be not at hand, use the muzzle of the bellows. Swift's Rules to Servants.
2. A fastening for the mouth, which hinders to bite.
The fish Harry from curbed licence plucks
The muzzle of refrains; and the wild dog Shall flesh his tooth on ev'ry innocent. Shakespeare. Henry IV.
And tall as flags, ran loose, and cou'd around his chair;
With golden muzzles all their mouths were bound. Dryden.
TO MUZZLE. v. n. To bring the mouth near.
The bear muzzles, and smells to him, puts his nose to his mouth and to his ears, and at last leaves him. L'Estrange.
TO MUZZLE. v. a.
1. To bind the mouth.
This butcher's cur is venom mouth'd, and I Have not the pow'r to muzzle him; therefore best Not wake him in his slumber. Shakespeare. Henry VIII.
Left it should bite its master, and so prove,
As ornaments oft do, too dangerous. Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.
The bear, the boar, and every savage name,
Wild in effect, though in appearance tame,
Lay waste thy woods, destroy thy blissful bow'r,
And muzzled though they seem, the mutes devour. Dryden.
Through the town with slow and solemn air,
Led by the nostril, walks the muzzled bear. Gay's Past.
2. To fondle with the mouth close. A low word.
The nurse was then muzzling and coaxing of the child.
L'Estrange's Fables.
My pronoun possessive. [See MINE.] Belonging to me. My is used before a substantive, and mine anciently and properly before a vowel. My is now commonly used indifferently before both. My is used when the substantive follows, and mine when it goes before: as, this is my book; this book is mine.
Her feet lie in my neck doth place.
I conclude my reply with the words of a Christian poet.
If my soul had free election
To dispose of her affection.
I shall present my reader with a journal.
MYNCHEN. n. f. [mynchen, Saxon.] A nun.
MYOGRAPHY. n. f. [myographia.] A description of the muscles.
MYOLOGY. n. f. [myologie, French.] The description and doctrine of the muscles.

M Y S

To instance in all the particulars, were to write a whole system of myology. Cheyne's Phil. Principles.
MYOPY. n. f. Shortness of sight.
MYRIAD. n. f. [μυριάς.]
1. The number of ten thousand.
2. Proverbially any great number.
Assemble thou,
Of all those myriads, which we lead, the chief. Milton.
Are there legions of devils who are continually designing and working our ruin? there are also myriads of good angels who are more cheerful and officious to do us good. Tillotson.
Safe sits the goddess in her dark retreat;
Around her, myriads of ideas wait,
And endless shapes. Prior.
MYRMIDON. n. f. [μυρμιδών.] Any rude ruffian; so named from the soldiers of Achilles.
The mass of the people will not endure to be governed by Clodius and Curio, at the head of their myrmidons, though these be ever so numerous, and compos'd of their own representatives. Swift.
MYROBALAN. n. f. [myrobalanus, Latin.] A fruit.
The myrobalans are a dried fruit, of which we have five kinds: they are fleshy, generally with a stone and kernel, having the pulpy part more or less of an austere acrid taste:
they are the production of five different trees growing in the East Indies, where they are eaten preserved: they serve also for making and for dressing leather: they have been long in great esteem for their quality of opening the bowels in a gentle manner, and afterwards strengthening them by their astringency; but the present practice rejects them all. Hill.
The myrobalan hath parts of contrary natures; for it is sweet, and yet astringent. Bacon's Nat. Hist. No. 644.
MYROLOGIST. n. f. [μύρολος and μολογία.] One who sells unguents.
MYRRH. n. f. [myrrha, Latin; myrrhe, Fr.] A gum.
Myrrh is a vegetable product of the gum resin kind, sent to us in loose granules from the size of a pepper corn to that of a walnut, of a reddish brown colour, with more or less of an admixture of yellow: its taste is bitter and acrid, with a peculiar aromatick flavour, but very nauseous: its smell is strong, but not disagreeable: it is brought from Ethiopia, but the tree which produces it is wholly unknown. Our myrrh is the very drug known by the ancients under the name name: internally applied it is a powerful resolvent, and externally applied it is discutient and vulnerary. Hill's M. Med.
The myrrh sweet bleeding in the bitter wound. Spenser.
I dropt in a little honey of roses, with a few drops of tincture of myrrh. Wifeman's Surgery.
MYRRHINE. adj. [myrrhinus, Latin.] Made of the myrrhine stone.
How they quaff in gold,
Crystal and myrrhine cups imbois'd with gems
And studs of pearl. Milton's Par. Reg. b. iv.
MYRTIFORM. n. f. [myrtus and forma.] Having the shape of myrtle.
MYRTLE. n. f. [myrtus, Latin; myrte, Fr.] A fragrant tree sacred to Venus.
The flower of the myrtle consists of several leaves disposed in a circular order, which expand in form of a rose; upon the top of the foot-stalk is the ovary, which has a short star-like cup, divided at the top into five parts, and expanded; the ovary becomes an oblong umbilicated fruit, divided into three cells, which are full of kidney-shaped seeds. Miller.
There will I make thee beds of roses,
With a thousand fragrant posies;
A cap of flowers, and a girdle
Imbroider'd all with leaves of myrtle.
I was of late as petty to his ends,
As is the morn dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea. Shakespeare. Antony and Cleopatra.
Democritus would have Concord like a fair virgin, holding in one hand a pomegranate, in the other a bundle of myrtle; for such is the nature of these trees, that if they be planted though a good space one from the other, they will meet, and with twining one embrace the other. Peacham.
Nor can the muse the gallant Sidney pass
The plume of war! with early lawrels crown'd,
The lover's myrtle and the poet's bay. Thomson's Summer.
MYSELF. n. f. [my and self.]
1. An emphatical word added to I: as, I myself do it; that is, not I by proxy; not another.
As his host,
I should against his murtherer shut the door,
Not bear the knife myself. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
2. The reciprocal of I, in the oblique case.
They have missed another pain, against which I should have been at a loss to defend myself. Swift's Examiner.
MYSTAGOGUE. n. f. [μυσταγωγός; mystagogus, Latin.] One who interprets divine mysteries; also one who keeps church relics, and shews them to strangers. Bailey.
MYSTERIARCH. n. f. [μυστήριον and ἀρχή.] One presiding over mysteries.
